

Animals and human

(I'll correct some parts of it afterwards and try to communicate realistically what the characters believe in just because this is an unfinished story it doesn't mean I should just write their beliefs in the middle of the story)

Emmet was a homeless child stealing things for his survival

Sleeping on the floor of a hallway with newspapers he'd find in the trash as a blanket

One day he was spotted stealing food from student's backpacks so they chased him down

Emmet went to an abandoned mine shaft but when he saw a dead end he knew his fate he turned around and... nothing

The lights of their flash lights disappeared before he turned around but he didn't think much of it but when he turned around they seemed to have disappeared he didn't understand what happened

He got close to the stairs and saw a shadow of a bonnie

He climbed up and in fear fell over

He saw a child sized bonnie with organic features it couldn't have been a suit and even if it was it would make no sense

he went outside quietly and when he saw the bonnie make eye contact and stutter he made a run for it to the forest

After hours of traveling it got dark he heard an explosion next to him and he ran towards the light and saw a cat in a gas station unconscious surrounded by fire. He ran towards her to bring her out of there but he burnt his legs in the process. The cat woke up and after seeing Emmet she ran away but called the ambulance when she got out of his sight

She felt sorry that because of her own mistake he hurt himself to save her no matter what he looked like she knew he was kind and brave and she wanted to help him because of it, she wanted to make it up for him

Emmet tried standing up but he just couldn't

The flesh of his legs were visible and some parts were as black as ash, every time his muscles twitched it felt like he stabbed that part of it, he cried constantly laying against the wall of the gas station looking at the fire

after the ambulance arrived they sent him to a containment cell where he'd heal his wounds and also be experimented because to them he was pretty much an alien, they used electric shocks every time he got a question wrong even if he knew it was the right answer and when he got it right the only thing he got is food as if he was a mindless animal with no deeper thoughts, beliefs and feelings

The cat was the only person who met him in the containment cell, she announced herself as Zora and she talked to him about how they treated him

He told her that he was fine so she wouldn't ruin her life by getting in trouble to save him

(Emmet believed that the only people who're kind are either people who suffer and relate to others because of it like him or be saved which lead to them wanting to do the same which was proven by how kindly Zora treated him not a single person in his life decided to help him

He doesn't know who his parents are and why they abandoned him but he knows that he's not like his parents.

he doesn't steal because of the sake of it he's fighting for his life in a world where everyone is beating him down he doesn't have any other choice. He's going to have a negative character arc)

Zora will try to break him out of jail after realizing what they're doing to him and Emmet will try to bring other inmates with him who also went through torture which will lead to them getting back to their crime spree

The belief that people who suffer relate to and better understand everyone else's struggle was proven wrong to him

Then Zora will be sent to prison and tortured for breaking him out of jail

Emmet will have a great disadvantage by being pretty much crippled but he tries to break her out anyways because he has no other reason to live

And when he finally gets to her after all this time and torture to save her the most painful words echo in the prison

“Who are you?”

They brainwashed her...

He goes berserk screaming in rage and sorrow and goes on a killing spree he doesn't see anybody as human as he was anymore

He started believing that everyone struggling or not is evil and whoever even dares to be kind to him is going to be used as nothing but another reason for him to end his life

They establish that there are kind people who care about him and then they just rip them away from him

He becomes as we like to call it

A psychopath
